To Africa and back: SVMH makes a world of difference in heart care

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL'S SAM Downing and a group from Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital amazed the U.S. ambassador to Ethiopia when they were able to bring 10 crates of medical supplies into that impoverished country.

The Ethiopian people touched members of the SVMH team with their gratitude and their need.

Some of the Ethiopian people receiving the $1.2 million worth of supplies called it a miracle.

Downing's group, which just returned from Africa Sunday night, was taking part in a humanitarian mission sponsored by Assistance International, a non-profit organization in Scotts Valley.

Members of the team spent nearly three weeks installing new equipment for heart surgeries and training doctors and nurses at the Black Lion Hospital in the city of Addis Ababa.

According to SVMH's Sue Marscellas, the African hospital badly needed the new heart monitors and ventilators. Before they arrived, patients had to be moved off the ventilators after only one day in recovery, according to Joe Sandoval, a biomedical services technician who also went on the mission.

Now the Ethiopian heart patients will be able

Pebble Beach tree cutter survives 70-foot plunge

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

WHEN THE office manager of Iverson's Tree Service came to see Chris Plympton in his hospital room, she said, "You are very lucky. We could have been attending your memorial today."

Plympton couldn't take her too seriously. He's used to his work being hard and dangerous, and he simply chalked up this last death-defying act as one more routine job in his life. His life is the life of a daredevil.

On Feb. 6, when the worst of the storms was pummeling the Central Coast, Plympton was at the top of a 70-foot Monterey pine on Trappers Trail in Pebble Beach. The tree was already uprooting when he climbed it, and Plympton was well aware of the life-threatening possibility that it might come down at any time. Suddenly the tree toppled, heading

Candidates split on dam, tourists, trees

By PAUL MILLER

IF IT were up to the candidates running for Carmel City Council, the Hatton Canyon Freeway would never be built and the town's controversial tree-protection ordinance might be revised. But they disagreed on whether a new dam should be built, and whether the city can continue spending money to lure tourists.

Four candidates for two seats on the Carmel City Council and an unopposed Mayor White faced a crowd of 150 at a forum sponsored by the Carmel Residents Association and The Carmel Pine Cone Wednesday night. Their sharpest disagreement was over what Cal-Am calls the Carmel River dam and reservoir project.

"Philosophically, I don't have any problem with the dam," said planning commissioner Frank Wasko. "My issue is stopping growth."

Former planning commissioner Sue McCloud called the dam a tough issue that leaves a candidate "damned if you do and damned if you don't." Like Wasko, she said she doesn't want water for new growth. But she called an adequate water supply "absolutely paramount" for replacing trees that die from pitch canker.

Mayor White said he would support another dam to provide for existing users, remodels and for unbuilt lots-of-record, and to protect against future droughts, but he doesn't want Cal-Am to build it because "then we'll lose control of it."

Councilmember Paula Hazdovac, who is seeking a second four-year term, was unequivocal in her support for a new dam, calling it "ridiculous to watch all this water raging down the river during the winter months."

Only council candidate Carolyn Hardy was flatly against a new dam. "Even though they call the dam a no growth dam it would definitely free up other well-water for development," Hardy said. And she denounced the

Why is Carmel beach closed on these beautiful sunny days? City Administrator Jere Kersnar says the danger is obvious from this photo of a wave bashing an unidentified public works employee on the landing of the 10th Avenue stairs. The landing is a good 15 feet above the rocks, and in normal years the waves don't come anywhere near. The stairs to the right disappeared, and were found (this is not a joke) floating near Santa Cruz.

Rancho Car Wash touts water-saving success

Water police warn of penalties to come March 25 for illicit car-cleaning

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE RESPONSIBLE local citizen who wants to drive a clean car cannot legally wash his wheels at home anymore, even if he uses the sponge-and-bucket method. That's because, under Cal-Am's "Phase III mandatory water conservation" rules now in effect, the only place you can legally wash your car is at a commercial car wash.

So it is comforting to hear that the new Rancho Car Wash has achieved its goal of using only 6 gallons of fresh water per car during its first four months of operation. The rest of the water is recycled through state-of-the-art equipment, installed after a big fight between Rancho Car Wash and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District last year.

In a highly-publicized tug-of-war, the MPWMD, the county and Rancho finally came to an agreement for a water permit for the new car wash at the mouth of Carmel Valley last fall. Rancho paid $17,416 in water connection fees, and was allocated about 1.7 acre-feet of water for its gift shop, landscaping, and car wash. The water district will monitor the car wash's water use until fall of the year 2000, and if it uses more than its allocation, the county's supply will be debited. On the other hand, if Rancho can conserve enough to use less than its allocation, the county will get the rest back in its water bank, and the car wash owners will get some of that $17,416 fee back.

"To our knowledge, there is no other car wash, even those with a recycle system similar to ours, that is having this level of success in water conservation," reported Bob Wickline, general manager of Rancho.

Wickline said his business is using less than half the water that MPWMD estimated last year, and he claims that's not because it's been raining for two months.

"In the past few sunny days, we had a huge volume of cars and actually averaged only 5.5 gallons per wash," he said.

Since school children can no longer legally wash cars to raise money, Wickline has opened his carwash for school fundraisers. His crew does all the work, and the students sell coupons, keeping everything they make over the $4 cost per coupon.

Car wash criminals beware

Although it has been illegal to wash your car at home since Cal-Am's Phase III mandatory water conservation rules went into effect, many people are not aware of it. And since there are no penalties attached to the rules — yet — the sponge-and-bucket bandits are not really risking much. But on March 25, Cal-Am's dreaded "Phase IV ENFORCED mandatory water conservation" rules are scheduled to go into effect, and then there will be penalties for breaking the water rules.

Even long-time locals can be flummoxed by the idea of water rationing right after the rainiest month on record. (One letter-writer observed that the most primitive cultures have managed to avoid drought and flood at the same time.)

But the State Water Resources Board has ruled that Cal-Am doesn't have the right to pump most of the water it has been taking all these years from the Carmel River, and the water utility has been ordered to cut

Winning by the book

TULARCITOS FIFTH grader Michelle Meyer won the Lyceum spelling bee by keeping a cool head when confronted by killer words.

Her brother, by contrast, was jumping up in the audience making touchdown signs whenever Michelle got the words right.

Michelle says she didn't study too much. Instead, she let her hard work in school pay off. An avid reader, she's landed at the top of her class read-a-thon three years in row.

Michelle knows what it's like to handle pressure. She's competed twice at the state level in gymnastics.

The spelling bee "wasn't as nerve-wracking as being on the balance beam," Michelle said.

towards asphalt and taking him with it.

"Honestly, I wasn't worried about dying, somehow. All I could think of was to stand up, get on top of it," Plympton said. "Actually, I tried to enjoy it."

Apply to this the logic that there are two kinds of motorcyclists: ones who have gone down and ones who will go down. There's really no difference. What happened to him is kind of what he's always expected to happen, he said. He just wasn't quite ready for it to happen during this climb.

Plympton said he's only known a couple of other tree guys who were felled with a tree, and one of them is dead.

Even though he was strapped in, he did manage to get on top of the tree and use the brush at the top as a kind of cushion. Plympton's injuries include a collapsed lung and a crack in one of his vertebrae. He said his injuries are "no big deal."

'Honestly, I wasn't worried about dying, somehow ...

Actually, I tried to enjoy it.'

— Chris Plympton

Mike Iverson, Plympton's employer and owner of Iverson's Tree Service got the business 20 years ago when his father took a bad fall, hit the ground, was severely injured and never able to work in the business again.

"You're up this tree all alone," Plympton said. "If you mess up you'll get crushed."

Plympton, 31, has been cutting trees for over a decade now. He does it, he said, because it's fun. "You're kind of on the edge all the time."

Plympton reports that Mike Iverson was present when Plympton fell. Even knowing the risks of the business, how did that spectacular fall affect his boss? "It scared the hell out of him and depressed him, because we're also good friends."

His doctor said he must wait two more weeks until he can again climb trees. Until then he's just wistfully observing the other guys. Plympton said he can't wait to get back to work.

"Trees are so flawed and unpredictable," said the fate-tempter Plympton. "There's really no escape route once you're up in a tree."

to spend more time recovering with the ventilators that help them breathe.

A different way of life

Downing, the hospital's CEO, was struck by the poverty he encountered on the rescue mission to Addis Ababa. Five-year-old children were carrying babies on their backs. People were living in cardboard houses.

Every night, members of the team would bag up their leftover food and give it to children on the street. The people were grateful for any help they could get.

"It lets you know that people in very bad conditions still put their families first," said Downing, whose wife Paula and daughter Brittany accompanied him on the trip.

"No matter how poor the people were, they always had a beautiful smile," Paula said.

The stark conditions in the Ethiopian city were all too evident in the Black Lion Hospital. When the SVMH team first saw the intensive care unit, it looked like an empty room with beds.

"I thought there's no way we're going to be able to do this, but we did," said Annette Schuessler, the director of intensive care and cardiac care units at SVMH.

Even though SVMH's technicians had to deal with a different power source and the hospital's thick brick walls, the heart equipment worked the first time they plugged it in.

Back home at the Salinas, the staff of SVMH isn't dealing with an empty room with beds. SVMH already has a full service heart center — the only one on the central coast.

They want locals to investigate for themselves the state-of-the-art equipment now available locally for heart patients, who formerly had to travel to Stanford for similar care.

This month, the hospital celebrates the grand opening of an expanded heart center that includes three catheterization labs, a new open heart surgery suite and a teleconference center.

For the next two weeks, SVMH and NASA are also sponsoring exhibits of how space technology is making strides in medicine.

NASA exhibits provide a glimpse at space and beyond

VISITORS AT NASA's exhibit at Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital this month can take a walk through the history of American space journeys. Some of the highlights include:

■ Moon rocks from three different lunar missions. The samples were taken from the both the lunar lowlands and upper regions of the moon, which proved to be strikingly different. The rocks are so valuable that every night they'll be locked up for safekeeping at the Bank of Salinas.

■ A model of the space shuttle Orbiter built to 1/15 of scale. The manned shuttle has been used to carry a wide variety of payloads into earth orbit. The space craft can transport up to 65,000 pounds into space.

■ Memorabilia from past space missions including flight suits, space food — packages of bacon squares, peaches, spaghetti and meatballs — and a sample of the special lightweight material used to make a space shuttle.

■ Examples of how space technology has made an impact in medicine including: the Apollo missions' "cool suit" that helps treat multiple sclerosis patients and a pacemaker that can be programmed from outside the body.

Voters will have to forget about the Hatton Canyon free-way project as a way to distinguish one candidate from another since every one of them was staunchly opposed to Caltrans' plan for a new highway.

Changing the tree ordinance

The latest controversial issue to storm the village found three of the candidates in favor of reviewing the tree ordinance that many in town believe makes it too difficult to remove a dangerous tree.

■ Wasco: "I've got 10 tall trees on my 40-by-100-foot lot, so yes, we should look at our tree ordinance."

■ McCloud: "People should be able to live without fear, and this could be an opportunity to underground utilities."

■ Hazdovac: "Human safety is paramount and the city needs a little more give-and-take attitude toward property owners."

■ Hardy: "I'm not convinced that our policies are out of order. Maybe we need to take a look at how they are administered."

Luring more tourists

The candidates are also divided on the question of continuing city funding of a marketing program to bring more visitors to Carmel.

Wasko said the $100,000 annual allotment would have to give way to "higher priorities," like the city's ambulance service and repairing damage from this winter's storms.

Hardy said the money should be spent instead on "what brings the tourists" to town — the beach and the forest.

But Hazdovac said the marketing program should continue. It is "an investment" which repays itself in the form of increased revenue by bringing more tourists to town mid-week and in the off-season, Hazdovac said.

McCloud said she would continue the funding if its effectiveness to mid-week tourists can be proved.

The Carmel Business Association will host another forum on March 19. Election day is April 14 and voters can register until March 16.

Carmel Foundation

By KIRSTIE WILDE

EVEN WITH thousands of postcards sent in from supporters, a parade of speakers on their side, praise from every single city council member and only two citizens voicing objections, the Carmel Foundation still lost its bid to run programs for senior citizens without interference from city hall.

"Even though it may not seem like it, we are on your side and trying to help you," Mayor Ken White told the disappointed members of the Foundation Tuesday night after the city council voted to require the group to get a use permit for their senior citizen activities from now on.

Council members Paula Hazdovac and Bob Fischer were the only votes for a motion to let the Foundation continue operating as it has for the past 50 years — basically unfettered by regulations from the planning commission or city council.

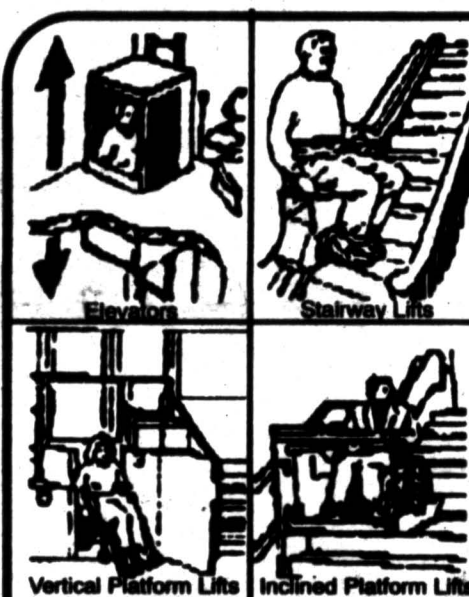

White joined Marshall Hydorn and Barbara Livingston to push for the use permit, saying that they felt a strong responsibility to protect Carmel's residents from "quasi-public" groups like the Foundation.

More than 4,000 members

Livingston pointed out that the Carmel Foundation's membership, standing at 4,067, is roughly the same as the entire population of Carmel-by-the-Sea, and she asked several times how many of the members actually live in the village, implying that the senior citizen group (of which she is a member) may not really be a "resident-serving" organization.

Livingston was told that 946 of the seniors are residents of Carmel, but others thought the figure was irrelevant. "Do we ask in churches, 'how many of you are Carmel residents?'" asked Fischer. Mel Kline testified that the Foundation serves residents better than any other organization in the village, providing 90 percent of the affordable housing in town and not getting a cent from the city budget. Several speakers wondered why residents need to be protected from senior citizens all of a sudden.

loses bid to be left alone

"In my 31 years in the police department, we didn't get one complaint about activities at Carmel Foundation," said Fischer.

Traffic and noise

But a few neighbors have complained recently, mainly about the traffic and noise generated when excursion buses pick up and drop off the seniors at the Foundation, located at Dolores and Eighth. Now that the Foundation has been ordered to apply for a use permit within the next two months, that issue and others will likely be debated in public hearings.

Several of the council members went on record as opposing too much government regulation, though, saying they do NOT want to interfere with the kinds of classes and activities provided by the Foundation as long as they do not adversely impact the quality of life in the neighborhood.

The council also voted to allow the Foundation to expand into a single-family home it owns next door, which will be used for computer classes for the seniors.

Carmel Art Association receives $60,000 grant from Segal Foundation

THE CARMEL Art Association's coffers have been boosted by $60,000 earmarked for building upkeep and improvements, thanks to a donation from the Barnett J. Segal Foundation.

It was Segal's recommendation, back in 1933, that inspired the fledgling art organization to buy the residence that was transformed into a series of galleries for display of members' works. One of the five indoor galleries is named after the benefactor.

Director Janet Howell says that all of the donation will be targeted to deferred maintenance. A steering committee will submit a list of priorities to the board of directors. Howell said, "Hopefully we will be able to complete some of the maintenance work this year."

Coffee Break

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

Must be what you call a 'guy thing'

WHEN YOU live a life as exciting as mine, checking the TV listings in the morning paper is an important activity. Last Saturday I noticed there would be a figure skating special that evening, and I mentioned it to His Prominence.

He groaned audibly. "The Olympics are over. What's the point if they aren't competing?"

"Well," I said, "they're talented skaters and something beautiful to watch. Like ballet," I added, inspired by my own logic. "From your point of view, ballet dancers would perform, then endure the agony of close-up views of their faces while their talents were graded by biased judges."

"Mmmmmm," he countered, burying his nose in the sports page.

It's a "guy thing," I guess, the constant interest in competition, and the need to read the scores in the paper the next day despite having heard them on TV the night before.

Men ARE different from women. If this comes as a surprise, then you must be about 10 years old.

For instance, last week I was behind a man driving a Toyota Camry. Both of us were in the left-turn lane on Aguajito Road, ready to access southbound Highway 1, when the Camry suddenly stopped, the driver's door opened, and the man SPAT into the street.

Now I ask you: When was the last time you saw a woman do that?! Lucky for him I didn't rear-end his car in mid-expectation.

Cars and men are one of the great mysteries of my life. I've been driving since I was 17, have had two tickets, and one minor accident (when a motorcycle ran into ME). My insurance rate is about as low as the law allows in California.

I cite all this to prove that I'm a capable driver, and one thing I'm capable of is backing up WITHOUT throwing my right arm over the back of the passenger seat. Having sometimes been the passenger IN that seat, I can tell you: It's a dangerous place to be. You can get slugged very easily.

The 'arm thing'

But every male driver I've known has done the "arm thing." Some even unbuckle their safety belt before they can negotiate the tricky business of backing up. This response is especially noticeable when a man is backing into a parallel parking space. I sometimes wonder if it's not some kind of mating behavior, comparable to the rising cock's comb of a rooster establishing his territorial rights.

It's not too far a stretch to say that male sexuality and cars go hand-in-hand. One has only to check the next Trans Am that passes to know that the driver is looking for "action." If he's of Social Security age, he really should get into some kind of counseling.

The younger male driver places a lot of importance on the "sound system" in his car. (WE used to call it a radio.) My son just recently sold his beautiful black Honda Prelude in order to buy a vehicle more practical for hauling music equipment.

The first person to respond to his ad was a teenage boy who got in the car, turned on the stereo for a few minutes, then said, "My dad will call you." It was a done deal. He didn't even take a test-drive. He knew all he needed to know.

If I had to put MY car up for sale, I'd first have to clean out all the "recycling" in it. I probably carry around more plastic bags than Dr. Kevorkian! My intentions are good, but my memory is bad, and the trunk fills up.

On the other hand, I know of a woman who, due to a shortage of closet space in her house, stores her Christmas ornaments in the trunk of her car. I have this image of her being pulled over to the curb by a strapping CHP officer and told to walk a straight line, count backwards from 20 to 1, and "decorate that tree over there!"

CHS principal quits; Marsha Kelly may step in

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

ERIC PAULSON, principal of Carmel High School for three years, is leaving this week to take the top spot at Homestead High in Fremont, whose 2,000-student body is three times the size of Carmel's.

Calling it a promotion, Paulsen added that he will also be going home to the

Paulson

Cupertino area, where he spent 29 years teaching before trying Carmel. "I'm excited about going back to friends and connections. I've really enjoyed the time with students, staff and community here, too. Everyone's been really great to me."

The Carmel Unified School District Superintendent, Joe Jaconette, is recommending that Marsha Kelly, who served as principal for Carmel High from 1981 to 1985, return temporarily as principal. Kelly now works at the Monterey County Office of Education.

Jaconette hopes to fill Paulson's job with a permanent replacement by May. A selection committee of school board members, parents, staff, administrators and students will screen applicants first.

Describing his accomplishments since succeeding Marie Ishida, principal of CHS for 10 years, Paulson said, "Carmel High has really moved forward according to our expectations in the past three years." Paulson cites the accelerated programs (AP) classes that are new to the school. Classes include: AP biology, chemistry, U.S. history, French, Spanish, studio arts, economics and government.

It's official: McC Campbell vs. Farr

PEBBLE BEACH Republican Bill McC Campbell says he only needs 3,000 more votes than he got in 1994 to unseat Sam Farr from the U.S. Congress, so he has formally announced another bid for the 17th Congressional District seat in November.

McC Campbell's number one campaign goal is to save Social Security by establishing $1 million retirement accounts to which workers could contribute 10 percent of their salaries.

His primary local issue is to cut back the development of Fort Ord, preserve 50 percent of its natural environment, and ban cars inside its perimeter.

RLS boys' hoops season ends on sour note

By JERRY STEWART

EVEN DAYS after the end, the Robert Louis Stevenson boys basketball team and head coach Bill Hankison still couldn't get the awful taste out of their mouths.

Their 59-58 Central Coast Section Division IV semifinal playoff loss to Pacific Grove last Saturday in Gilroy was tough enough to swallow, but it was the way their season concluded that left the squad feeling a little bitter.

After standing toe-to-toe with the No. 1 seeded Breakers, a team that had beaten the Pirates twice, RLS has tied the score 58-58 on two Shawn Cronin free throws with only eight ticks left in regulation.

Seeking overtime and a possible upset, the Pirates went into a full-court press, hoping to kill the clock and force an extra session.

But then, at a time when no call probably would have been the right call, officials made what Hankison called "an extremely controversial call."

According to Hankison, as Breaker star Eddie Banaszek was dribbling the ball, he was brushed by Pirate defender Bubba Beyah, and a foul was called.

With only one second left, Banaszek sank the first of a 1-and-bonus foul chance to sink the Pirates' season.

"It's upsetting," said Hankison. "I didn't see an obvious foul, but then again I'm biased about it. The game should've gone to overtime where the kids could've decided the outcome."

For RLS, who finished the year at 12-17, it was their tenth loss by three points or less and their fourth loss with less than three seconds left on the clock.

"It's unfortunate," said Hankison. "But don't take anything away from P.G. They're an excellent team."

Leading the way for the Pirates were Jason Ware (20 points), Chuck Evans-Claassen (11 points, six rebounds) and Cronin (16 points, eight rebounds).

Hankison said that when it counted the most the RLS defense stepped up along with the Pirates inside big-men.

"I'm extremely proud of the kids," said Hankison. "We were doing all the little things really well."

WATER PENALTIES

its customers' water use — no matter how much it rains.

According to Darby Fuert of MPWMD, the water cops will first give a verbal warning, then two written notices to a customer who persists in violating the conservation rules. If the customer still wastes water, Cal-Am can lower the boom by installing a flow-restrictor that will reduce water delivery to the customer's home to a mere trickle of six gallons per minute.

The water uses which are not allowed include:

- washing airplanes, cars, buses, boats, trailers or other vehicles at any time, except at commercial or fleet car washes.

- washing buildings, structures, sidewalks, driveways, patios, parking lots, tennis courts or other hard surfaced areas.

- allowing run-off into the street

- violating landscape irrigation schedules

- using water to fill non-recycling fountains, lakes or ponds.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Employees with 401(k) retirement accounts can choose from a variety of stock and bond funds. One type not widely offered is known as stock index fund. This differs from the typical stock fund whose managers try to outperform standard market benchmarks, such as the Standard & Poor's 500. Instead, an index fund invests in the stocks that make up such a benchmark. In recent times few managed funds have outperformed the index funds. However, in event of a stock market slump, actively managed funds have more flexibility to minimize losses.

On his 82nd birthday, Sir Alec Guinness unveiled a plaque in London saluting his 60 years in films. He won an Oscar in 1957 for his role in "The Bridge Over the River Kwai" and special Oscar in 1979 for elevating the art of screen acting. But Sir Alec played it humble at the plaque ceremony. "My contribution to film has always been negligible," he remarked. "My first love has always been the theater."

Lady Pirates shoot for CCS glory tomorrow

By JERRY STEWART

THE NO. 1 seeded Robert Louis Stevenson girls basketball team will get a chance to bring home a CCS championship when they take on MTAL rival Notre Dame of Salinas Saturday morning at San Jose State's Event Center.

The Lady Pirates reached the final round by defeating Menlo High 60-45 Tuesday behind the 25 points of Katie Denny (shown here in a regular season win over Carmel) and crushing Castilleja High 70-19 last weekend.

Unlike their cruise control win over Castilleja, the Lady Pirates needed a big second half run to get by pesky Menlo.

Senior forward Jessica Canning, who scored 20 points against Castilleja and 13 against Menlo, said that the easy opening round win over Castilleja was a confidence-booster in their quest for a championship.

"That game calmed us down a bit," said Canning. "We've all got a lot of experience and our hard work over the summer is now paying off."

With four starters standing at least 5-foot-10, many of Stevenson's opponents are intimidated even before tip-off, but Notre Dame has seen the Lady Pirates before and will not succumb so easily.

'Boring' election year draws plenty of interest

Wednesday night's CRA-sponsored candidate's forum was, according to CRA President Mary Condry, the "biggest she's seen."

A lot of people left the packed meeting room wondering why, in a period of little upheaval and not much controversy, and with Mayor White running unopposed, so many people in town are taking an intense interest in this year's council elections.

One theory is that, because only one of the council candidates — Paula Hazdovac — is an incumbent, the crowd turned out to hear from three council hopefuls who are not that well known. Sue McCloud, Carolyn Hardy and Frank Wasko have all been active for years and have contributed more than their share to the town's well-being. But their views on the important issues of the day were unknown to many voters.

Or maybe the big crowd turned out to see if McCloud and Mayor White — who had a public spat when White declined to reappoint McCloud to the planning commission last year — would engage in fisticuffs. [They behaved themselves.]

Undoubtedly some in the crowd — fresh from spending several days without power or phones, or from lying awake at night while a nearby giant pine or two swayed in the ferocious wind — were passionately interested in the candidates' positions on Carmel's numerous large trees and the ordinances designed to protect them.

Many in town were discombobulated last month when they were told that plans for Sunset Center are back where they've been for 35 years — up in the air. The future of Carmel's ambulance service was on many minds. Business people — concerned about the big February slowdown — want to know if the new council will care about their problems. All these things helped draw the crowd.

But the big issues that electrified the public in years past won't sway many votes on election day. All the candidates oppose the Hatton Canyon Highway, for example, and hardly anybody showed up to hear about that. There are no big development projects proposed in the city that have got people frightened about preserving the town's charm.

In fact, the similarities among candidates were in many respects more striking than the differences. One woman in the audience offered the opinion that all of them should be elected.

We think that the big crowd showed that Carmel-by-the-Sea is entering a new and promising phase of cooperation instead of confrontation. Many in the village have embraced a sense of common purpose that has induced not apathy, but energy.

Five years ago the business community and the residents were at odds over several key issues. But there's been a slow movement toward the center by both groups. Businesses recognize that one of the keys to their success is preservation of the town's charm and scenic heritage. Residents increasingly recognize that they won't be able to keep the expensive city services they're used to without sales tax and TOT revenue to pay for them.

Later this month, the CBA will host its own candidates' forum. Because of the consensus in town on so many issues, the questions — and the answers — at the business forum will be largely the same as the ones asked and answered at the residents' group forum this week.

NASA and Salinas Valley Memorial heart center

Dear Editor:

Salinas Valley Memorial Healthcare System welcomes residents of the Carmel and the Central Coast to the celebration of the newly expanded, regional Heart Center. In partnership with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. (NASA), we're offering; a first-of-its-kind, regional community education event from March 7 to 21, 1998.

We encourage local residents to visit the Hospital's and NASA's displays and tour the newly expanded Heart Center. This free event is geared to the interests of all ages and we hope you'll find time to attend as a family. Tours will be available in English and Spanish.

Heart disease continues to be the number one cause of death in this region, as well as across the nation. We believe that increasing public understanding of rapidly-changing heart care treatments and procedures, as well as disease prevention, helps improve the health of area residents. This in turn helps reduce health care costs and, more importantly, improves quality of life.

The nation's space program has contributed enormously to advances in health care technology — everything from heart pacemakers to bone-density scanning equipment. This connection between space research and advances in health care technology is a focus of our event. Improved understanding of the resources we offer to mend and maintain healthy hearts is our goal.

"Partners in Health Technology" is the event's theme. It features 15 days of lectures, displays and tours. NASA does not charge for its participation in public events. As "Neighbors Who Care," we, too, are

CODE CHANGE: Kersnar free to appeal commissions' decisions

By PAUL WOLF

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Jere Kersnar will no longer find himself in the awkward position of filing an appeal over a commission decision in behalf of himself. From now on, it will be on behalf of his office.

Kersnar

The Carmel City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to allow the city administrator to appeal planning, forestry and other advisory decisions to the council. Kersnar will be spared the $200 fee as well. But that is the least of it. He will avoid having to appear like a partisan on issues he would rather stay neutral on.

"I don't intend to invoke this privilege often, or to use it to second-guess the commission," Kersnar told The Pine Cone. "The situations we are talking about are very unusual."

Kersnar said his primary goal is to send decisions of questionable legal standing to the city council for a final vote. "I'd like to use it for situations in which we could get sued," Kersnar said.

In his five years at his job, Kersnar has personally appeared only twice to appeal the decision of an advisory body.

Sorting out the mess

About two years ago, acting as a private citizen, he appealed an application to the city council after the planning commission and forest & beach commission disagreed on whether to approve a landscaping plan on private property. Because the property owner never filed an appeal as a way of getting direction on what he could do on his property, Kersnar volunteered to sort out the mess by appealing it himself.

"This person had been put in the horns of a dilemma, and that's not fair," Kersnar recalled.

In January, Kersnar again stepped up to oppose the planning commission's approval of Orville and Ellina Golub's variance request for a planned addition to their home on north Carmel beach.

As the city is tangled in ongoing litigation with the Golubs, Kersnar believed the commission made a decision — to grant the variance — that was "in error" from the city's legal position. The council, voting January 6, agreed with Kersnar's view.

Technically, a city council member can "call up" a decision for council review. But that council member, as the appellant, cannot then vote. The full council of five people is then not available for an important decision.

In the Golub example, Councilman Marshall Hydorn has been excusing himself from voting because he has a conflict of interest in the case. (His daughter owns property nearby.) Therefore, the council would be dropped down to only three voting members were a council person to appeal a decision such as the variance request.

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston suggested the issue isn't so much about the city administrator's authority, but the council's ability to be the final judge. "The ultimate decision should lie with the city council. I don't think the city administrator will abuse this privilege."

In other actions Tuesday, the council voted to lower the hotel tax from 10.5 percent to 10 percent.

Rare coins stolen, two dozen bikes found

COINS AND bicycles count among the hot property local police are investigating.

A Carmel resident reported that $30,000 worth of gold and silver coins were stolen out of his garage sometime between December 15 and February 23.

The coin collection — consisting mostly of U.S. coins dating from 1885 to 1929 — vanished with the box they were stored in at the Dolores and Fifth residence. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

Bikes by the dozen

If you're missing a bicycle, you might want to check the loot Monterey Police recovered from a house on De La Vina Street March 4.

Officers found 22 complete bicycles, 39 stripped bicycle frames and other stolen bike parts. Police arrested 29-year old Dimitri Andretz, who is charged with possessing stolen property and a firearm.

Victims of bike theft can call Monterey Police at 646-3830 for information.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

What traffic-related issues are of interest or concern to you as a resident, property or business owner in Carmel-by-the-Sea?

This question is just one of several that you may be interested in discussing.

As a Council member, I would like to see our community develop a series of "Community Workshops" to increase communication between us (as residents, property and/or business owners) and Council members elected to act on issues of concern to our village.

Community workshops are just one idea for increasing our teamwork and communication.

TRIBUTE TO MY SPONSORS

The morning after my sold-out CD Release Concert, I headed for my next concert--Star Classics in The City. My favorite chauffeur/husband, Bill, and I got into our Monterey Jaguar, stopped at Caravall Coffee Company for a cup of steaming latte, then headed for Tarpy's Roadhouse for a luscious brunch on the way to the concert... With brunch, I ordered Gold Medal winner Ariel non-alcoholic sparkling wine, which was served at the CD concert. Then, we got back into our auto, set the radio dial to Magic 63 AM, popped open a bottle of Big Sur Bottled Water and rode on. After the Star Classics concert, we went to our home-away-from-home, Embassy Suites. While enjoying the spa and room service, I took The Carmel Pine Cone out of my tote, caught up on the local news, then switched off the lights and fell asleep dreaming of The Concert at The Media Room, and of those of you who braved the elements to sponsor/celebrate the release of my CD with me. PB roads repaired; Big Sur highway may take months

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE FRIDAY convoys to Big Sur have been cut off again because of dangerous new cracks beneath Highway 1 at Hurricane Point.

According to Caltrans, the cracks will require a much more expensive and time-consuming repair, possibly delaying the opening of Highway 1 another two months.

As of press time Thursday not even pedestrians were being allowed to use Highway 1 south of Palo Colorado Road. The sole access to Big Sur (for locals only, I.D. will be checked) is the long way around, using Nacimiento-Fergusson Road to Highway 101.

Access to Palo Colorado is also being cut back, to 7-10 p.m. and 6-6:45 a.m. only, for the next two weeks while Soberanes Point is being worked on round-the-clock.

17-Mile Drive

The news is much better for Pebble

Beach residents, and folks in Carmel tired of seeing tour buses routed through the village, because the repair of 17-Mile Drive is almost complete.

According to Pebble Beach Co. construction manager Brent Reitz, all of the Drive will be open Saturday, except the portion along Pescadero Canyon.

"We've already built eight retaining walls along the canyon road and are on target to open Pescadero by March 16," Reitz told The Pine Cone Thursday.

The link between Carmel and Pebble Beach across the canyon is now open to two-way traffic.

His crews were just taken off 24-hour shifts, which will give them a break from weeks of work with no days off, and neighbors a break from the night-time construction noise.

Reitz said as soon as Pescadero opens, Del Ciervo Road will be closed so that damage to its retaining walls can be repaired.

DINING OUT

A visit to PortaBella provokes the appetite

MY FIRST conversation with Csaba Ajan a year or so ago had to do with the spelling of the popular giant mushroom, "portobello." The genial owner of PortaBella joined me in investigating the origin of the name which, with terminal "A's," means "beautiful door." The delicious fungi's name either means "beautiful harbor," a silken dessert wine, or it may derive from the noun porgere, to offer. Like all culinary research, interesting and appetite-provoking. Dining at the PortaBella restaurant is, also.

One of the most pleasant things about PortaBella is its welcoming ambiance. Come through the "beautiful door" and snuggle into one of the booths, or if the weather is fine, the vine-wreathed patio is a happy haven for both shopping-weary tourists or savvy locals. (An added attraction in

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

PortaBella follows the trend towards "little plates," as evidenced by the tapas appetizer which offered peppered goat cheese, a potato galette, a crab and scallion cake and some of the best gravlax I've had the pleasure of devouring. Another house offering is the portobello "sandwich" layered with goat cheese and red onions, the whole sitting in a savory pool of multi-hued bell peppers blended with wonderfully mysterious herbs.

The thick, creamy corn and crab bisque is a cold weather treat guaranteed to turn chilled fingers and toes toasty and the Wild Mushroom Napoleon serves well as a light entrée.

Main courses that deserve the adjective

Main courses deserve the adjective . . . they literally overflow the plate. Roasted Free Range Chicken with Red Potatoes and Herbes de Provence is a meal and a half, while Mahi Mahi with Lemon Saffron Rice and vegetable accouterments defeated me in terms of quantity.

In a vertical presentation, Monterey Sand Dabs topped flavored mashed potatoes ringed by a teepee of crunchy green beans. Medallions of Lamb Loin is another hearty choice.

Desserts bring no surprises, Brioche Bread Pudding, Tiramisu, Crème Brûlée, and several other standards, all properly prepared and ample in portions. If you need suggestions as to wines, either Csaba, Brian or sprite-like waitperson Amy, will be glad to suggest and direct. The list is sufficiently extensive to please all.

Returning to the chef, from the restaurateurs with whom he has worked in the past, plaudits are unanimous. I hope he'll be encouraged to make some updates and additions to the PortaBella menu. Devotees of the present classic Mediterranean fare are many, and hungry tourists flooded the cozy spot the rainy Sunday night we dined there.

However, the range and influences of the flavors of Mediterranean cover a vast geography including not only the Italo-Iberian-Portuguese cookery but the North African and Greek, as well. Because no establishment subsists on visitors alone and each needs enough change to bring the locals back for more, how exciting it would be to see some of these more exotic tastes incorporated under the international and experienced guidance of Ajan and Aronson.

I also feel that culinary talent should be explored and I'd like to see a bit more of Aronson's hand in the kitchen. All in all, a cozy, very Carmel type of dining experience, filling and fulfilling.

Pat Senatore Quartet

Sat.
Mar. 7

Bassist and composer Pat Senatore has performed with an incredible list of luminaries over his year in the jazz world. He began his career with the Stan Kenton and Les Brown orchestras and was an original member of the Tijuana Brass. He has toured with Buddy Rich, Carmen McCrae, Anita O'Day and others. As owner of a jazz club for some years, he had his own trio that at times featured Aland Broadbent, Roger Kellaway, Peter Erskine and Billy Higgins. His 1995 CD for Moo Records is entitled Pasquale, and it reveals Senatore's great sense of jazz time and melodic phrasing.

Pianist, composer and arranger Hal Galper plays be-bop with unique freedom and spirit. His career has included playing three years with Chet Baker, three years with Cannonball Adderly and ten years with the Phil Woods Quartet. After all that experience, plus having his own quintet featuring the Brecker Brothers in the late '70's, he began recording under his own name for Concord Jazz in 1990. His playing is energetic and versatile, and with Jeff Johnson on bass and Steve Ellington on drums, the trio will provide an evening of sophisticated music with a big beat.

Ricardo Peixoto Trio

Sat.
Mar. 21

Brazilian guitarist/composer Ricardo Peixoto returns to the Jazz Store after a great performance here last year. He has studied music and guitar in Rio de Janeiro, at Berklee College of Music, and with Pat Metheny. His music is filled with unusual harmonies, rich melodies and great Brazilian rhythms. He has performed with Flora Purim and Airtio, Bud Shank, Claudia Villa and Terra Sul, and his unique and exciting music draws from his diverse background of jazz, classical, and Brazilian styles. With Peixoto, Carlos Oliveira will be playing guitar and Michael Spiro will be on percussion.

Kenny Rankin Quartet

Sat.
Mar. 28

Kenny Rankin is an incredible entertainer whose music is sophisticated and highly nuanced. With a beautiful voice of great range and a good sense of showmanship, his Jazz Store concerts have always been quickly sold out. He has had a string of great recordings including Because of You, Professional Dreamer, and his latest, Here In My Heart, on the Private Music label. This will no doubt be a great evening of standards and original music.

Hayes and Cahill

'All Ireland' fiddler Hayes, guitarist Cahill play Sunset

EXPERIENCE the "fierce joy in Celtic tradition" with Saturday's Carmel appearance by fiddler Martin Hayes, accompanied by guitarist Dennis Cahill. This Performance Carmel concert begins at 8 p.m. in Sunset Theater.

Martin Hayes was champion of six All-Ireland fiddling titles and during his teen years was also a member of the famed Tulla Celli Band. His style of playing comes directly from the older generation of musicians in his native locality of east County Clare, a part of Ireland known for its slow, lyrical sound. Now he is known for playing traditional music and working with musicians from vastly different idioms including jazz and rock.

Guitarist Dennis Cahill was born in Chicago to emigrant parents from County Kerry. Like Hayes, he has combined the traditional with the experimental, developing a unique approach to finger-picking traditional and contemporary Irish music that incorporates the ornaments and subtleties used by various instruments in performing traditional Irish music.

Sunset Theater is on San Carlos at Ninth in downtown Carmel. Tickets are $16 and $12.50. Subscription series for the Performance Carmel season are still available. For more information, call 624-3996 or write to Sunset Center at P.O. Box 1950, Carmel, CA 93921.

Some 22 bands have accepted invitations to play at the '98 Dixieland Monterey, including first-time attractions Big Tiny Little, Made in the Shade and California-based Gremoli, Crazy Rhythm, Jazz D'Elegance and the U.S. Marine Corps March Band. Stages are in place at the DoubleTree Hotel, Monterey Conference Center, Wharfside Restaurant on Fisherman's Wharf and Cibo's Ristorante Italiano on the corner of Alvarado and Del Monte.

All venues feature music beginning Friday and running through Sunday, except Cibo's, which has a Saturday-only schedule. Other venues are: DeAnza Ballroom and Portola and Bonsai rooms in the DoubleTree Hotel; and the Serra I and II ballrooms, Steinbeck Forum and Ferrante Room at the Conference Center.

Joe and Mary Ingram, Monterey-based musicians, will be paid special tribute by Dixieland Monterey with sets on Saturday afternoon (1:30 p.m. in Bonsai Room, 4 p.m. in Serra II Ballroom).

Spirituals again headline the Sunday morning Dixieland schedule, with three different sets featured at 9 a.m. A fourth Spiritual is slated for 10:30 a.m.

Dixieland Monterey, a non-profit event that provides scholarships to local high school music programs and junior colleges, is proud to announce that four youth bands will be playing at this year's Festival. Nouveau Jazz (Pacific Grove), Salinas High School Hot Jazz Ensemble, North Monterey High School Hot Jazz Ensemble and Hull's Angels are all scheduled.

All-Event Badges, allowing for admission to venues throughout the weekend, are $50. Friday

Red Cross Centennial Ball does this region proud

IT WAS a Cinderella setting at the Monterey County Chapter American Red Cross Centennial Ball, staged at the Naval Postgraduate School McNitt Ballroom.

Even though Cindy and her handsome prince were not present, more than 200 attended the affair, dressed to the nines. All paraded around the dance floor to the music of the Scott Brown Orchestra.

Not since the county's First Red Cross Ball, back in February 1903, has this gala been so popular. This year, the Monterey County Historical Society put on a program giving a full account of the thousands of pioneers involved with the Red Cross.

Did you know that the Monterey-Pacific Grove Chapter was founded two months after the outbreak of the Spanish-American War? Miss Lou Henry, who later became Mrs. Herbert Hoover, presided over the first meeting at the residence of Mrs. C.D. Henry in Monterey. Emily Fish, (1843-1931) the first woman lighthouse keeper at Point Pinos during the Civil War, was a member of the U.S. Sanitary Commission (predecessor to the Red Cross). And, Miss Margaret A. Jacks (1875-1962), whose father was Monterey pioneer David A. Jacks, was instrumental in organizing the local Red Cross chapter.

A historic newspaper clipping display put together by Anita Mason depicted 100 years of Red Cross activity, including helping disaster victims in the San Francisco 'quake of 1906.

Chairman Jackie Craghead of Seaside with her husband Don, and co-chair Lorin Hofmann-Lurz, greeted the attendees. The crowd included Monterey Mayor Dan Albert and wife Joanne, Supervisor Judy Pennycook, Seaside Mayor Don Jordan, Chef Wolfgang Puck (right) shakes a spoon at Chef Guy LeRoy, who was head chef 12 years ago at Highlands Inn. Stanley Rogalsky, beverage director, looks on during the Masters of Food and Wine.

Seaside Planning Commissioner Chairman Felix Bachofner, Margaret Leighton of the Pebble Beach Co., Army Colonel Dave Gross and wife Laura, Ruthie Watts, and Honorary Chairman Ron Weitzman, Pacific Grove Mayor Sandra Koffman and Morley Brown.

KSBW TV-8 newscasters Dan Green and Kate Callaghan emceed the event that included special presentations and a marvelous centennial cake ceremony.

In the spacious ballroom was an incredible replica of an American Red Cross disaster tent canteen, complete with coffee urns and donuts. The display complemented the dinner tables which were decorated with red crosses and red rose centerpieces.

This 100-year celebration for a humanitarian organization led by volunteers was touching and wonderful because during the recent storms that deluged Monterey County, you saw them at work — guardian angels of us all!

■ Twelfth Annual Masters of Food and Wine sizzles!

The gods of ancient Greece (jealous, because they weren't invited), tossed thunderbolts and tried to close Highway 1. Did that stop us? No! Hundreds of us merely followed the signs through Fern Valley and reached Highlands Inn just in time for the opening of the 12th Annual Masters of Food and Wine.

How can I describe to you the loveliness of this event? It's elegance in the grand style, symbolized by understated simplicity. That's the talent that the organizers behind the Masters have. They make a richly complicated event like this look so simple and easy.

I met people from Honolulu, New Jersey, the Philippines, Turkey, Napa Valley and Nevada, who all said they'd never miss this much-needed week away. One woman, whose baby is only four-weeks-old, said that when she comes home after the week-long event, she feels rested for several months. Then she sipped at an absolutely divine Kiedrich Grafenberg Riesling Spätlese Trocken 1994 from Robert Weil and smiled at me like a contented cat.

I don't know anything about German wines, but at the luncheon with Wolfgang Puck, Alan Wong and Janet Rikala, when Rikala's warm pineapple upside-down cake with mandarin orange and ginger sorbet was served with another Riesling from Robert Weil, it was a nectar from heaven. Indeed, the very distinguished wine and food writers with whom I was seated, told me that that dessert wine especially, was probably the best in the world.

Wolfgang Puck cooked for us and lectured about cooking before the luncheon, and I was delightedly surprised to hear him say, "Look, if you don't have all the ingredients I am using, use what you do have and a little imagination. For instance, this dish calls for lime which I don't have, so I am using lemon and a little soy sauce." We all came away feeling that it might not be too hard to create something ourselves.

Sunday, the last luncheon served, was called Fish Market Grill, and again, all the dining areas of the Inn were available for guests to roam around. Buffets invited participants to heap their plates with swordfish, Pacific sardines, scallops, all kinds of shrimps, and Sam DeMarco, proprietor of First New York, New York, served spaghetti with crab meatballs, lobster sausage, tuna braciolo and yellow tomato sauce to die for.

I heard a group say that if they didn't attend the Masters, they'd have to visit each chef and winery in each country. Where else can you get it all in one event? The Masters! Since it was ambrosia fit for the gods, I can see now why the gods were angry for not being invited.

■ Peter Max wows them at Dyanson Gallery in Carmel

I got there early, but, more than 200 people quickly descended on Dyanson Gallery in Carmel within one hour, and they ran out of champagne. That's what happens when an artist is as hot as world-famous Peter Max, whose paintings are on the walls for one and all to gaze at. They're just terrific. Everyone knows Peter Max.

Michael Blazina, director of Dyanson, said that most of them will sell, so you'd better hurry if you want one. I especially liked the ones entitled "Vase of Flowers, Series XIV," and "New Moon No. 43."

Max told us that many years ago his paintings sold for $100, and now they're selling for upwards of $50,000. I wish I could paint. Great show!

✓ JUST IN

Don't forget that Saturday night the Friends of the Alliance on Aging is holding a great ball at Quail Lodge. Great, because everybody in Monterey and Carmel is taking part in it, singing, dancing, modeling and helping to make it their best yet. Call them for tickets.

NOT SO SANDY CLAWS

THERE IS NO SAND, and there are no claws in this week's Sandy Claws feature — only a driftwood dachshund overlooking a plethora of ocean-smoothed logs and sticks below Scenic Drive — between Stewart Way and Bay View Avenue.

The driftwood doggy, which sports an optic yellow tennis ball eye, was created by Carmel artist Richard Southard over the weekend, much to the amusement of joggers, walkers and bikers who passed by the sausage sculpture.

Not exactly a trompe l'oeil, but more of a tongue-in-cheek towser, the wiener woody's ears appear to be blowing in the breeze, its tail held jauntily erect as the wooden woofer stands on the windswept bluff gazing seaward with jaundiced eye.

Southard, originally from Maine but a Carmel painter/sculpture "on and off" for 35 years, has been having a sculptor's field day with the unending supply of driftwood washed up during the recent storms. His Alice-in-Wonderland paintings are generally displayed at the White Rabbit on Dolores Street, and his seascapes at Boatworks on Ocean Avenue.

When we left Southard, hard at his sculpting, he had a splintery schnauzer assemblage in progress. By the time you read this, the bluff may be populated by a whole kennelworth of curious curs.

COMING HOME

*Everything in life takes practice learning to die
living with moments
walking on dark roads
Calling my own name*

*Giving birth to all the ordinary in pain
humbled on knees
I learn to stand*

*Tall
in the rain, alone
wrapping remembrances
thick around empty hands*

*In the distance
the sea whispers my name*

*over and over fog plays gypsy to the wind
the moon calls home to the night*

In darkness and light clouds cover the rose birds soar higher than I ever imagined

*The song above the longest day
my breath repeats
the sound
no longer a stranger
at my own door*

New city rules may halt demolition of homes listed on 'historic' survey

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL OFFICIALS announced this week that demolitions in the city will no longer be exempt from the review process of the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA).

The city has adopted a new policy that calls for further study and possibly an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) before any of the 178 homes listed as "significant" on the city's historic survey can be demolished.

Before this announcement, demolition of a single-family home in Carmel — even if the home had historic value — was handled with an administrative permit and was considered exempt from state environmental quality laws.

After studying recent court decisions concerning demolitions and historic buildings in other California cities, Carmel officials decided that demolitions in the village might be a violation of CEQA — a law which is widely understood to be about environmental protection but which also calls for preservation of the state's historic resources.

The court rulings said that if a demolition was tied to any rebuilding — such as a new house on the same site — that had to be approved by a city committee, then the demolition itself would not be administrative and was not exempt from the CEQA process, Roseth said.

The 178 houses currently listed as candidates for historic designation on the city's list were assessed during a survey conducted by the Carmel Preservation Foundation. So far only six of those houses have volunteered to be put on the historic list.

Enid Sales, chair of the city's historic preservation committee who spearheaded the Foundation's surveys of 2,000 homes in Carmel, praised the new policy as a step in the right direction.

"It's a great improvement," Sales said. "At least our structures that we care about, that have the character of Carmel, have a chance to be saved because of historic importance."

But some in town see the new policy as just another delaying tactic. Carmel designer John Mandurrago, who hopes to replace the Hitchcock house on Mission Street with a residential care facility, will now have to wait at least until city staff conducts an initial study of the house.

While he says preservation is important, Mandurrago doesn't think the delay is justified in his case. "I don't think the Hitchcock house is even historic," he said. The house's original owner is said to have been the grandson of one of California's original settlers. Mandurrago says such a "claim to fame" is flimsy.

But Sales argued that architecturally the house, which she says was built in 1905, is "pure craftsman" and the owner, Joe Hitchcock, was important in his own right in Carmel.

Roseth says that one of the purposes of the new policy is to give the city the chance to "scrutinize the data" to see if the homes are, in fact, historically significant.

If the initial study determines that a building is, in fact, an historic resource, then a property owner might be required to prepare an EIR for the proposed demolition — a process which can cost many thousands of dollars. And unless the EIR identifies ways that the loss of the historic house can be mitigated, CEQA would, in effect, prohibit its demolition.

"My guess is that the list would probably be winnowed down a little further (after the city conducts initial studies)," Roseth said.

Carmel's "Museum of Windchimes"

By GERALDINE REEVES

LONG AGO and far away the wind-chime was invented and a charming musical sound was born.

According to Webster, "A cluster of small chimes or pendants of glass, ceramic, copper, bronze, ivory, silver, or bamboo, hung so they strike one another and tinkle when blown by the wind."

I was introduced to them for the first time in post-war Japan. There they were hung only in the heat of the summer — to imbue the listener with a sense of being cooled by the wind, no matter how hot it was!

Now we are privileged to have Robin Stockwell's "Succulent Gardens" with the largest selection of windchimes in the country to charm us with its extensive and varied collection for any season of the year. Visitors return year after year from far and near to shop and visit the succulent gardens at the Barnyard in Carmel.

The sound of these wonderful musical instruments vary since many of the chimes are hand-tuned. And they come in melodious sounds of every description.

They can be sweet-sounding, musical, harmonious, canorous, cantabile, Lydian, dulcet, mellow, smooth, soothing, sonorous, rotund, rich, orotund, silvery, or euphonious. Whatever your mood or disposition, a wind-chime can be found to match it.

Robin Stockwell, a native of Half-Moon Bay and a teenager in the 60's, changed his mind about going into the Diplomatic Corps after a proud two years in the US Army ('70-'72). He is now educating four children with a career that was not his 'plan A.'

A "water-person" who enjoys surfing and backpacking, Stockwell undoubtedly has a love affair with the great outdoors. He opened his little, 700-square-foot "Succulent Gardens" eighteen years ago. Two years later Michael Largen of Carmel Valley introduced chimes to Stockwell and talked him into carrying his copper windchimes.

Robin's hideaway in the back lot of his now 2,000-square-foot garden and gift shop displays hundreds of major brand windchimes from far-away places such as Japan, China, and Bali, as well as "Made in the USA"— California, Colorado, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, and Maine, to name a few.

Bells and chimes have been evident in all cultures since the beginning of time. We are the benefactors of these glorious musical instruments played by a wind song.

The "Succulent Gardens" is one of the few places where people know all the answers and are trained about the products available.

Visit your Carmel "Museum of Windchimes" at the Succulent Gardens in the Barnyard. Take the kids for an education in a different kind of beautiful music provided by Mother Nature.

Ferlito on trees "missed the point"

Dear Editor,

Karen Ferlito's "factual" reply to our "exaggeration and hysteria" (Feb. 27) completely misses the point, blinded as she is by her zeal to save her dying urban forest. "We have always been a city in a forest." In fact much of this forest is here by artifice. Forests belong in National Forests, not in cities.

She warns us against "decision that may have disastrous consequences." To the citizens? You must be joking. To her trees, of course. It is the stubborn refusal of her clique to make reasonable decisions that has already produced disastrous consequences; but she can't and won't recognize them. Ignoring all the evidence, she offers specious statistics (doubtless manipulated by our certified arborists) proving to her satisfaction that the number of "tree failures" (a nice euphemism) in the latest storms is unacceptably low — to be compared with the casualties of our soldiers being sent off to war. Is it being hysterical to beg her commission to allow us (not them) to decide whether the pine lurching over us is likely soon to main or kill us?

What difference does it make if these huge, ugly trees have pitch canker, root rot or black beetle? They are, at 80 to 90 years old, near the ends of their lives; and, like the members of the forestry commission, it is time for them to go. How much more damage, or worse, must we tolerate while we hang on for two more years (or five or six?) until the Messiah comes from U.C. Davis bearing his sacred seedlings? Oh, I see, we must keep all those new two-story monster houses "in scale" — we must right one wrong with another.

"Living in a forest comes with inherent risks." A house on an earthquake fault, on a very steep hill or near a frequently-overflowing river is at a risk that is difficult or impossible to overcome. But aged, top-heavy and shallow-rooted pine trees over our houses can be removed.

"There must be improved compliance." Now we see the mind-set of the tree police — the arrogance of the single-minded fanatics who have worked their way into official power.

I saw this kind of "we know what is best for you" madness in the 1960s when extremists succeeded in turning Berkeley into a "nuclear-free zone." That childish self-indulgence didn't hurt anybody, but here it does. Will somebody explain to Mme. Ferlito and Messrs. Kohn, Thomas, et al., that they are forcing their self-indulgence on us (even if they are in the majority and we are in the minority — which I doubt and I want that question answered) at the expense of our preservation of life, and liberty and the pursuit of (our) happiness.

One of them once told us that if we didn't like the huge pine trees over our house we should move. We don't have that luxury. It took much self-denial to pay for the small Carmel cabin that we purchased in 1977. We were at the time uneasy about the neglected trees standing in the property of absent second-home owners. Over the years we had to pay for some of them to be trimmed. Whatever tree mania there was then had not reached the crescendo of insanity that now grips the forestry commission and victimizes us.

But I have a good idea. Let those who want to live in a true forest (not in a city, for you cannot have both) move to the Amazonian jungle. There they'll have tree canopies high, low, and in-between; no electric wires to be broken; none of the other amenities of our late 20th century civilization that they hold in such trivial regard. We shall be rid of them and their sick trees. And in our retirement years we shall be able to sleep at night.

D.E. Goldbloom, Carmel

Trees and tigers

Dear Editor:

Kudos to Karen Ferlito for her thoughtful and informative commentary regarding Carmel's trees in the Feb. 27 Pine Cone. Ms. Ferlito has eloquently defended the current rules and regulations regarding the 'urban forest.'

If a tiger kills a villager in India there's a hue and cry to go out and kill the tigers. If a few trees fall in an unusually strong wind it's "Let's go out and cut them down."

I am convinced Carmel is in good hands thanks to level headed and sensible people like Ms. Ferlito and Mr. Kelly, thank you both for your good work.

PROFESSIONAL FULL SERVICE MANAGEMENT FOR YOUR PROPERTY

Property Management means more than collecting a fee for handing out keys and collecting rents. It is the careful matching of individual needs and taste to a home that will fulfill those needs. It is conveying the feeling of WELCOME HOME for each renter, and the feeling of security by homeowners that their property is receiving the best possible care and attention to detail.
